Miners Walk Out At Empress This Morning

Miners and muckers crews walked out this morning at the Empress Mine. It was not, according to the miners, a "sympathy" strike. Their statement is that they had been promised that the scale adopted by other mining operators in the [illegible] increasing the wage around 50 cents per day, would be adopted in the Empress. When the raise failed to materialize, according to the miners they walked out.

'Palooka' the Big Laugh at Local Theater

Featuring the screen favorites, Jimmie Durante, Lupe Velez, Stuart Erwin, Marjorie Rambeau, Robert Armstrong, Thelma Todd, and Mary Todd, the Nevada Theatre tonight and Tuesday night presents "Palooka", the comic tale of a son, who wanted to follow in the gay footsteps of his dad, but is halted by his mother.

Wednesday and Thursday nights comes "Viva Villa", undoubtedly the greatest picture screen hit of the year. Wallace Beery in his great variety of stellar roles, more of a constellation than a star, heads the great cast. This picture is historic in two senses. It is the only great picture ever filmed partly in Mexico, and its story is of historic interest.

COWS INVADE GIRLS CAMP AT GOLD HOLLOW

BY CAMP CORRESPONDENT

A numbr of Girl Reserves in the past week chose to "go native" in the primitive camp where they learned to sleep on pine needles instead of mattresses, to build fires and cook over them, to blaze trails and build a rustic bridge over a brook and to meet in their natural habitat some of the wild life of Nevada County.

Hiking has been a popular activity. Last Monday three groups of girls started off on gypsy hikes, carrying their lunches in bandanas slung on the end of sticks. Their destinations were the Yuba River, the square pool in Rock creek, and Younkers ranch. Each group dramatized at camp fire in the evening their experiences and discoveries which included meeting Indians, miners and old residents of this region who told them interesting tales of the early days here.

Many groups of girls have been horseback riding and one of these got up early the other morning and had a breakfast ride, which means that they took along materials and cooked their breakfasts en route. All riding has been under the direction of Miss Rosalie Netto of Berkeley.

One of our serious handicaps during this camping season has been other peoples cows. Due to lack of proper fencing around our property —we have a herd of cattle that make themselves at home in our orchard where the girls sleep, in our crafts workshop where they mistake raffia for hay, in our primitive camp where they all but wrecked the kitchen and the sleeping bags and on our sports field where they ate our archery target. Owners please take warning that the following solutions to the problem have been suggested by Girl Reserves and may be acted upon at any moment. A barbecue, a big game hunt, a caravan of covered wagons drawn by cattle to take the last group of campers home to the bay region, milk shakes and roast beef for Sunday dinner.

The direct effect of the threatened general strike has reached Gold Hollow. Instead of the group now encamped leaving on Monday and the newcomers arriving on Monday, it has been decided to have them go out and come in on Sunday, in order that girls from San Francisco and returning to San Francisco may be sure of getting across the bay on the ferries.

Unless the strike changes our plan this camp will close July 23. It has been a very happy camping experience and everyone is enthusiastically looking forward to returning next year to Gold Hollow.

MISS BETTY BETTLES OPERATED ON THIS MORNING

Miss Betty Bettles was operated on for appendicitis at Jones Memorial Hospital in Grass Valley at nine o'clock this morning by Dr. Carl P. Jones.

The operation was a success and Miss Bettles will soon be about, which will be good news to her many friends.

COWS EAT PLANE AT NEVADA CITY AIRPORT

Lee Moore, the pilot of the Spartan ship at Nevada City's airport, may sing: "Yes, I Ain't Got No Bananas" all he pleases but the cows who make the top of Cement hill their rendezvous, will not believe him.

The ravenous cows have been licking off the banana oil dressing on wings and fuselage of the ship. It has a little salt in it, and while the banana oil must give them a terrible stomach ache, for the transient pleasure of the salt they lick off the oil, and while they are about it tear out big strips of the linen covering for permanent cuds. When not thus engaged they use the ship for a scratching post, and since most of them are extremely skeletonized, occasionally a big hip bone goes through the linen.

Question: Who Will Pay State Deficit Bills?

By RALPH L. TAYLOR

Even with the most drastic economy program possible, the 1935 State Legislature, when it convenes at Sacramento in January, will face the unhappy necessity of levying additional taxes for the support of state governments.

That fact stands out clearly and inescapably in all the tangle of post-depression governmental finance. Only a miracle, or at least a rapid and substantial upturn in business, bringing with it a return to normal revenues, could close the preset gap between income and outgo. Even a sudden swing-back to prosperity would fail to wipe out the huge deficit in the state's general fund.

There are two questions of primary importance to the taxpayer in weighing the problem:

WHO WILL PAY BILL?

First, "Who will pay the bill?" "What sources will the state tap for new revenues?"

And second, "What will the bill total?" "How much must be raised in new taxes?"

Inquiring into the requirements for new revenues first, the present state deficit totals about $31,000,000. To this must be added $65,000,000,000, due to the shifting of utility property next year to county tax rolls and the loss of this revenue to the state. And to this must be added approximately $20,000,000 more—the estimated shortage in present income to mee....t estimated expenditures of the coming biennium. If it is dehired to consider the outlook at worst, there must still be added to this some $17,500,000 in arbitrary increases for schools social service and capital improvements for hospitals, prisons, etc.

The grand total—or staggering total, if considered from the taxpayer's standpoint—is $133,500,000! And even the most ruthless slashing of state expenditures, with the elimination of all improvements and the drastic curtailment of services under the Legislature's control, would still leave the total well over the $100,000,000 mark! "Fixed charges", voted by the people and subject to reduction only by a new vote of the people, would effectively block any further reduction.

WHERE TO GET REVENUES

Where, then, will California legislatures look for $100,000,000?

One of the first suggestions heard in many quarters but with public sentiment concerning it yet unknown, is that the current deficit of $31,000,000 be canceled by a state bond issue, rather than new taxes—the bonds to carry low rate of interest and be retired over a period of 15 or 20 years. This plan would pass part of the burden on to posterity or at least a new generation.

And to raise the remaining $70,000,000 in new revenues for the coming two year period there are almost as many schemes as millions—but with no unanimity of opinion as yet on any one plan.

Various proposals to tax "hard liquor" are under consideration, for example, but the yield from this source would probably not exceed more than $3,000,000 or $4,000,000 per biennium.

Still another suggestion—but one which would be certain to bring a heated battle—is a state income tax, projected on the theory that it would place a tax on wealth to balance the present sales tax, which is carried largely by taxpayers of moderate income. Such a tax would probably not raise more than $12,000,000 per biennium. It was favored by farm organizations two years ago, passed the Legislature, but was vetoed by the late Governor Rolph.

Increases in the gas tax, the truck tax, motor vehicle fees, etc., are among other proposals, while still another suggestion is a so-called severance tax on oil, gold and other "natural wealth".

But none of these tax measures offers any hope of raising the tremendous sum necessary. Taken together, they would still fall far short. To bring in the huge sum apparently necessary, there must be one of two plans; Either a new tax, reaching into the pocketbooks of a major part of the tax-paying community, or a combination of many small revenue producers, together with higher rates on some existing tax sources.

George Haight Stumps for Son in Gov. Sprint

George W. Haight, father of the gubernatorial candidate, Raymond L. Haight, were visitors in the Nugget office this morning. Haight has the distinction of being a member of one of Northern California's pioneer families. A first cousin of George W. Haight's grandfather was Governor of California from 1867 to 1871. Mr. Haight senior is now a Los Angeles attorney and expresses confidence that his son will be California's next governor. He has recently met relatives in Placer county who are out working for his son's election. In fact, Mr. Haight states that the entire Haight clan of California, some 300 strong, have their coats off in a drive to elect another Haight governor.

RFC Will Make Loans on Mine Properties

SAN FRANCISCO, July 16.— Liberalization of the restrictions on federal loans for mining are being rapidly worked out in Washington by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation with which Congressman James Scrugham of Nevada, sponsor of the amendment granting loans to mines, and Charles H. Segerstrom, chairman of the executive committee of the Gold Mining Association of America have been working for some time, says a report received at the headquarters of the Gold Mining Association of America at San Francisco Thursday. Every effort is being made to have the rules and regulations ready at the earliest possible moment so that the amendment may becom operative.

During the past week considerable progress has been made in clarifying the situation. Scrugham and Seagerstrom have been instrumental in clearing up a number of questions regarding the methods of how loans shall be made the class of security and methods of handling.

LOANS CONDITIONAL ON SECURITY

Scrugham, whose amendment to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation provides for the granting of loans upon adequate security, based upon mineral acreage to recognized and established mining corporations, partnerships and individuals, has for the past ten days or more been assisting Reconstruction Finance Corporation officials with the drafting of regulations and restrictions governing these loans.

As sponsor of the amendment which was passed by congress late in May, Congressman Scrugham's technical and expert advice and interpretation of limitations regarding mining loans have bee tentatively accepted by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. As was expected, as a result of his efforts a liberal policy will be adopted.

"On the basis of the conditions made public by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for granting loans to industries," said Mr. Segerstrom, following his meeting with Scrugham, "it is abvious that these lending powers of the federal organization will not be used for the indiscriminate pumping out of money. The requirements are so stringent that it is doubtful if a great volume of loans to industrial projects will be made.

"However, Congressman Scrugham has been able to collaborate with Reconstruction Finance Corporation officials upon a more liberal interpretation of these restrictions which, if adopted, will ease the present strict limitations whenever mining loans are considered."

BORROWERS MUST BE SOLVENT

According to Scrugham, limitations governing loans and tentatively accepted by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the potential borrower must be a "recognized and established corporation, partnership or individual". That is, the applicant must have been established in business prior to January 1, 1934, and must be solvent and recognized as having business ability and character. A close adherence to this rule discourages applications from wildcat promoters.

Loans will be made to provide working capital and this money may not be applied to fixed capital nor pay any existing indebtedness.

No loans will be granted for strictly promotional purposes or to pay back taxes, to make good salaries or to finance primary developments. "Adequate security" will be demanded for all loans but the Scrugham amendment makes it lawful for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to loan on mineral acreage of proven value. This includes properties having sufficient ore reserves, proven in quantity and grade. It will also include mineral acreage upon which a minimum amount of development and a partial blocking out of ore has been completed.

ENGINEERING SCRUTINY

Government engineers, according to Scrugham's plan, will carefully examine all properties offered and unless there is a further liberalization in policy, valuations will be sufficently conservative to afford real protection to the government for loans. Properties being operated on a royalty basis will be eligible for loans although it is understood that very strict provisions will be made regarding mortgages, leases and all receipts for ore shipments to smelter during the life of the loan.

As a protection to itself, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will stipulate that the borrower must agree not to declare any dividends during the life of the loan without the consent of the corporation and must grant the Reconstruction Finance Corporation full power to dictate the salaries of all company officials.

IMPETUS TO MINING

Tasker L. Oddie, president of the Gold Mining Association of America, who is in San Francisco said: "The recognition by the government of the importance of the mining industry toward increasing employment, while supplying purchasing power, especially where gold and silver are the metals mined, is the soundest stimulus the mining industry has ever received.

"It is directly due to Congressman Scrugham that the amendment was passed, but the movement for such action originated in the western gold producing states. For more than a year the states have been working to secure the support of the government in a movement that will promote employment, increase the wealth of the nation and cause no overproduction."

Work has been placed under the direction of F. A. Moss, active in the operation of the mine a number of years ago. All concerned are well known engineers. Crawford makes headquarters at 25 Tenth Place, Long Beach, and Enos' office is 1203 Hollingsworth Building, Los Angeles. Moss has recently been at Perth West Australia, on the staff of the Western Mining Corporation, Ltd. The Pioneer has been opened by an 1,100-foot tunnel.

"Second Revolution" Smashed by Hitler and Its Leaders Put to Death—Roosevelt Names Five Boards and Sails Away.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© by Western Newspaper Union.

FOREWARNED of a radical plot within the National Socialist party to bring about a second revolution in Germany, Chancellor Adolf Hitler struck with swiftness and ruthlessness that completely smashed the revolt on the eve of the planned coup d'etat and left the malcontents, chiefly members of the Storm troopers, dazed and terrified. The Chancellor himself exhibited resolution and personal bravery which the world had not credited him.

Chancellor Hitler

Flying from Berlin to Munich in the night, Hitler with only two bodyguards went direct to the summer home of Capt. Ernst Roehm, commander of the brown shirts and long his personal friend. Roehm and certain of his associates were found in situations that confirmed the often heard stories of their moral perversion, and as Hitler was certain also of their complicity in the revolutionary plot, he personally arrested Roehm, tore off his insignia and offered him a chance to commit suicide. This Roehm refused, so on Hitler's order he was shot to death, as were the others taken with him. Meanwhile, Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, premier of Prussia, directed a series of raids throughout the country that resulted in the deaths of numerous prominent members of the conspiracy and the arrest of scores. Chief among those shot down was Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, Hitler's predecessor as chancellor and reputed head of the revolutionary plot. His wife stepped in the way of the policemen's bullets and also died. Well-known Storm troop leaders in Munich and elsewhere were put to death summarily, and so was Heinrich Klausener, head of the Catholic Action party.

Vice Chancellor Franz von Papen, who had recently attacked the radical tendencies of the Nazis, was put under heavy guard, and forbidden to leave his home, and two of his adjutants killed themselves.

Von Papen offered to resign from the cabinet, but President Von Hindenberg, his close friend, refused to accept the resignation, and the cabinet urged him to remain as minister without portfolio to supervise activities in the Saar. Von Papen, however, will take a protracted leave of absence.

Viktor Lutze was appointed to succeed Roehm as chief of staff of all the reichswehr units, including the Storm troops among whom the disaffection had existed and the regular army, which was declared to be entirely loyal to Hitler.

Viktor Lutze

President Von Hindenburg all this time was at his estate at Neudeck, East Prussia, and there were reports of his serious illness, which were flatly denied. Two days after the chancellor's drastic action the aged president telegraphed Hitler and Goering his approval of their course, congratulated them on their victory and thanked them in the name of the nation. Undoubtedly, Hitler's personal position was strengthened for the time being, and the leftist elements in the Nazi party were weakened and divided. Goering and Hitler professed pity for the "misled" Storm troopers, but the latter are now out of their uniforms temporarily and may never be as important as they have been in the past. They had become something like a pretorian guard that threatened Hitler's supremacy.

In various European capitals there were predictions of further outbreaks in Germany and the return of the Hohenzollerns.

Hitler's "violent" methods were criticized by Engelbert Dollfuss, Austria's dictator, who said: "Does not the light at last dawn upon us that one cannot make a people happy with violent methods?"

Paris interpreted the affair as a victory for conservatives and as opening the possibility for a return of the Hohenzollerns. The violence, it was claimed, revealed a breakdown in the unity of the Hitler movement.

In London the view was taken that Hitler had solidified his position. Some papers accused him of employing the methods of gangsters and called the slaying of storm-troop leaders "brutal murders."

TRADE war between Great Britain and Germany was averted by the signing of an agreement protecting British interests during the reich's six months foreign obligations moratorium, ordered in effect July 1.

Under the accord, Germany agrees to pay Young and Dawes plan obligations when due in October, November and December, on presentation of coupons on bonds by the Bank of England.

For six months, beginning July 1, the German government is to provide sterling funds to the Bank of England for the purchase in full at the nominal value of all coupons on these loans held by British subjects on June 15, when the moratorium was disclosed.

JAPAN'S cabinet resigned as a result of a financial scandal involving a vice minister, and the emperor called on Prince Saionji, last of the elder statesmen, for advice in selecting a new premier. The prince recommended Admiral Keisuke Okada for the place and the emperor made the appointment, which was generally considered very wise. Okada asked Koki Hirota to remain as foreign minister, and the minister of war and navy also were reappointed. The new government is expected to follow the general lines of policy laid down by Saito, retiring premier. One of its chief aims will be to clean up graft.

Japanese naval circles are convinced that Okada is the only man capable of safely piloting the nation through the naval conference next year. They feel that Saionji selected Okada because he realized that the conference will be of the utmost importance to Japan's future.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT departed on his cruise to the Caribbean and Hawaii aboard the Houston, accompanied by his two younger sons, Franklin, Jr., and John; Rudolph Forster of the White House secretarial staff; Commander Ross T. McIntire, naval physician; Gus Gennerich, personal bodyguard; Richard Jervis, secret service man, and Pharmacist's Mate George Fox. On accompanying destroyers are two secret service men and three representatives of three big press associations.

J. M. Landis

Before sailing the President performed these seven important acts:

Approved the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium bill.

Approved the railroad unemployment and pension act involving additional burdens of millions of dollars on the carriers.

Appointed Joseph Kennedy, wealthy New York stock operator as chairman of the new securities exchange commission for a five-year term, and George C. Mathews, James M. Landis, Robert E. Healy and Ferdinand Pecora as members for terms ranging from four years downward.

Named Eugene O. Sykes, Thad H. Brown, Paul Walker, Norman Case, Irvin Stuart, George Henry Payne and Hampson Gary members of the new communications commission for terms ranging from seven years downward.

Set up the new national labor relations board with Lloyd Garrison, dean of the University of Wisconsin law school, chairman, and Prof. Henry Alvin Mills, head of the economics department at the University of Chicago, and Edward S. Smith of Massachusetts, labor relations specialist, as the other members.

Named James A. Moffett, former vice president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and a member of the planning and co-ordinating committee of the oil conservation board, as administrator of the new $1,000,000,000 housing program.

Appointed five members of a commission to study federal aviation and air mail affairs and make recommendations to the next congress—Clark Howell, Atlanta, Ga., publisher; Jerome Clarke Hunsaker, New York; Edward P. Warner, Washington, D. C.; Franklin K. Lane, Jr., California, and Albert J. Berres, California.

MR. ROOSEVELT went ashore for the first time on his cruise at Cape Haitien, Haiti, where he was met by President Stenio Vincent and other officials of the island republic. At the Union club he made an address, partly in French, in which he announced the forthcoming withdrawal of the marines, adding that he hoped they would be remembered as friends who had tried to help Haiti. Marine detachments have been on duty in Haiti, whose population is 90 per cent colored, since 1915.

MME. MARIE CURIE, co-discoverer with her husband of radium and rated as one of the world's greatest women, passed away at Passy in the French Alps at the age of sixty-six years. Her physicians said that her inability to recover from an attack of pernicious anemia was probably due to the fact that her bone structure was weakened by years of exposure to radium and X-rays.

The Netherlands was thrown into mourning by the death of Prince Consort Henry. He was married to Queen Wilhelmina in 1901 and the Dutch people had learned to love him deeply.

ATTEMPTS to open the port of San Francisco, closed for some time by the dock workers' strike, resulted in bloody riots in which several men were killed and many injured. Gov. Frank Merriman called out 2,000 National Guardsmen.

PRIME MINISTER RAMSAY MACDONALD of Great Britain, who is in Scotland on a vacation, was bitterly assailed in the house of lords by Viscount Snowden, former chancellor of exchequer and once close personal friend of the premier. Snowden denounced MacDonald as a traitor to his colleagues in the Labor party and to the country.

"The cabinet found the prime minister such an amenable instrument of Tory policy," Snowden declared, "that it has come to the conclusion that there are no professions which he made, no pledges which he gave the country which he will not repudiate, no humiliation to which he will not submit if they only allow him still to be called prime minister.

"The Tories have no use for MacDonald except for exhibiting him on their platform in chains as the one-time Socialist who has seen the error of his ways and found salvation in the spiritual home of the Tory party.

"He will be used for the same purposes as the reformed drunkard at temperance meetings."

SENATOR BORAH of Idaho, independent Republican, opened his one-man campaign against the New Deal in a radio address attacking especially bureaucracy and monopoly. Although his criticism was directed primarily against what he conceives to be these elements in the New Deal, he summarily indicted the national leadership of the Republican party on the ground that it "seems wholly unwilling to touch this vital issue" —namely, the monopolistic trend.

Senator Borah

The senator said the Roosevelt regime was establishing not Nazism, not Fascism, not Communism, but "simply that meddlesome, irritating, confusing, undermining, destructive thing called bureaucracy." And bureaucracy he defined as "that form of government which steals away man's rights in the name of the public interest and taxes him to death in the name of recovery." Bureaucracy, the Idaho senator asserted, "has destroyed every civilization upon which it has fastened its lecherous grip."

It is the common man who will be the chief victim of our new bureaucratic form of government, the Idahoan asserted. The influential and powerful have demonstrated that they "can generally obtain all the rights and privileges they desire under any form of government." But the "freedom and political rights" of the toilers are being more and more limited, whether under European dictatorships or the American bureaucracy.

WINDING up its fiscal year, the federal government found that, counting emergency expenses, it had spent about $4,000,000,000 more than it had collected. Balancing receipts against ordinary expenditures, the government figured it was $28,000,000 "in the black" for the year.

President Roosevelt has estimated nearly $5,000,000,000 would be added to the national debt by emergency expenses during the next 12 months. This was predicated on recovery that would make industrial production average 98 per cent of the 1923-25 level.

In July, 1935, the President hopes to start the payoff for the recovery program. By that time, he has said, the budget should be balanced.

According to the federal reserve board's index, the industrial production figure for the year just ended was slightly above the 81 per cent average on which the President based his hopes.

TWO events in recent days have emphasized the friendship that exists between the United States and Canada. The first was the dedication of the new International bridge spanning the St. Lawrence between Rooseveltown, N. Y., and Cornwell, Canada. Secretary of War Dern represented President Roosevelt at the ceremony, and the earl of Bessborough, governor general, was there for the Dominion.

The second event, on July 4, was the return to the Canadian government of the mace of the parliament of upper Canada that was taken during the War of 1812, at the battle of York, and had been in the Naval academy at Annapolis ever since. On recommendation of President Roosevelt congress authorized the restitution of the mace. Rear Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of the bureau of navigation, accompanied by his aid, Lieut. Com. Ernest H. von Heimburg, made the presentation at Toronto and attended the unveiling of a monument erected by the United States' Daughters of 1812, to the memory of General Pike and others of the United States' forces killed during that war.

THERE was a general scattering of administration chieftains following the departure of President Roosevelt. Secretary Roper went to Alaska and Secretary Morgenthau to a Montana ranch. Secretary Dern sailed for the Canal Zone, and Secretary Swanson and Attorney General Cummings were down on the lower Potomac on yachts. Secretary Hull took motor rides in the Virginia mountains. Secretary Farley was in New York, and Secretary Wallace went to Chautauqua. Secretaries Ickes and Perkins remained at their job. General Johnson went to Saratoga Springs for a rest, Harry Hopkins sailed for Europe and Professor Tugwell went to the Far West. Lesser lights also left Washington.

MEXICO elected a new constitutional president—Gen. Lazaro Cardenas—and it was the quietest election in the country's history.

THERE are actually a good many sensible features in the present Soviet government in Russia. The idea that no public official should receive more than $150 a month is sound; so is the habit of promptly punishing officials when they are dishonest or negligent. . . . But the determination to live by Communist principles will wreck Sovietism. Communism is so palpably weak in so many respects it cannot succeed. The objection to the teaching of Karl Marx is it will not fit human needs. The poor man is entitled to justice; but so is the man who refuses to remain poor. And in the human experiment there has never been found a tribe of men wherein the majority were willing to remain in perpetual poverty. Nature provided means for all to become well-to-do, and the better specimens of men will not consent to forever remaining uncomfortable when comfort abounds and may be easily attained by not unreasonable effort. I may not be here to see the end of the Russian experiment, but let younger men remember the prediction that Communism must be given up there. Like whisky, it is a fool; it will not stand practical trial.

Negroes are very disagreeable in bothering whites for gifts. I have spent the present winter in an apartment house in Miami, Fla., and have found everything satisfactory except my failure to satisfy the negro servants. An old fellow living nearby is so much annoyed that he will not let a negro maid come in; he does his own cleaning up, and I often go over to enjoy his indignation. I have been whipped into submission, but admire a man brave enough to rebel in a good cause. . . . The poor whites are as bad as the negroes in begging. About the only real vigor shown in the United States during the past winter has been displayed in begging campaigns. Everyone is apt to be a little prejudiced when discussing his own case, and it really seems to me I do my share in proper giving, but the American system of begging seems to me disgraceful. Much of it is racketeering; the selfish business of boss beggars who hide behind the scenes and browbeat timid citizens into engaging in charity campaigns they do not themselves believe in. Ask any American what he is most disgusted with, and he will probably tell you it is committee begging. The smart French do none of it; the Germans and English very little. It is an American weakness; one of many we all disapprove of, but do not quit. Instead of quitting, the nuisance is becoming worse every day; leaders in it are trained as others are trained to become stenographers, doctors, lawyers, machinists, to pull teeth, and receive large incomes from the dishonest business.

* * *

There is more than the usual complaint lately about big business men. A new charge is they do not manage their wives and children with reasonable efficiency. . . . No American does; specially foolish women and children are as common among the poor as among the well-to-do. The manner in which American women muss up their men has been the wonder of foreigners since the foundation of the republic; Americans no more assert themselves in their homes than they do in politics. And look at what the politicians have done to them. . . . Americans need a lot of reform in a lot of ways.

* * *

I find I can't stand good times; my greatest mistakes have been made during good times. . . . And I cannot appreciate now that times were very good when we agree they were at their best. Times are always hard; we must constantly save and be careful.

* * *

A traveler says that when an American picture play is presented in Germany, the lingering kisses, the bravery of the Western heroes, the nobleness of the heroines, attract whistling from those in the audience. . . . The Germans are making fun of us. . . . Have we not reached an age when we should recover from some of the conspicuous follies which attract contemptuous criticisms in older countries?

* * *

The great Goethe had 14 Great Worries in his life, and was often in complete despair, but at last left much to his credit. All the great have staggered along in the same way; so worried by women they had little time left for anything else.

As it is, always has been, and always will be, there have been some quite remarkable men; perhaps it is idle to speculate upon what greater thing they might accomplish if less hampered with love.

* * *

It seems to me managers of the professional charities should issue a card of thanks to those Americans who have kept out of the bread lines, and helped a little in relieving the misfortunes of others. During an exceptionally hard winter a man who maintains his family respectably, and does not bother his neighbors for assistance, is an especially good citizen. He should receive an occasional kind word of appreciation, instead of daily insults from professional charity workers that he is a stingy brute who does not Do His Duty.

Use Sour Cream

If your sweet cream sours, you need not throw it away. You can whip it just as you would sweet cream and use it in making a salad dressing. It is delicious added to any other dressing. Of course, you can also dilute it and use it in a cake batter by adding a little soda.

Welcome American Slang

However rude or crude are American terms, they are so expressive and impudently near the truth that it is hard to resist giving them a place in any honest lexicon, says the Montreal Herald. Such terms are "graft," "onceover," "foolproof" and "step on the gas." This was the explanation given by President George Gordon of Magdalen college, Oxford, England, for their inclusion in the new supplementary. Among other phrases which have been introduced into the English language in the last 50 years and given a place in the dictionary are "all of a doo da," and "give it the once over."

DR. W. E. FITCH TALKS ON MINERAL WATER

Tells Why It Is Often Helpful for "Rheumatic" Aches and Pains

EUROPEAN SCIENTISTS CONFIRM OPINION

Recently William Edward Fitch, M. D., member of the International Society of Medical Hydrology and author of that comprehensive book "Mineral Waters of the United States and American Spas" spoke as follows on a program over the National Broadcasting System:

"Drinking a mineral water is not like drinking an ordinary water, for in addition to the virtues and therapeutic value of the water itself, the combined minerals, some of which are in such infinitesimal proportions as almost to defy man's limited power of analysis, produce systemic changes which affect disease profoundly. . . . In Europe, of course, mineral water treatment has been known for thousands of years, and is universally accepted. . . . I am happy to have contributed in a small way to the spread of knowledge of this form of treatment in our own great country, for here we have the same needs as Europe's population—the same diseases, the same suffering, the same problems—and bountiful Nature has provided the same form of treatment—natural American mineral waters sparkling and bubbling from the earth, ready and able to end serious and painful disease."

When we think of what Dr. Fitch has said of the real value of mineral waters—and then think how very few people can afford to travel to America's mineral water resorts—it is very important to know about Crazy Water Crystals, and the happiness they have brought to millions suffering from "rheumatic" aches and pains and other chronic ailments. Crazy Water Crystals are just precious minerals crystallized from a great natural mineral water—a type of mineral water that has built one of America's greatest health resorts, to which 150,000 people flock every year. You just mix Crazy Water Crystals with plain water, and make a great mineral water at home.

And Crazy Water Crystals are very economical. A standard sized package costs only $1.50 and is sufficient for several weeks treatment in your own home. Crazy Water Co., Mineral Wells, Texas.

CHAPTER I

—1—

One afternoon in the spring of 1877 a solitary horseman rode down the long, ghastly desert slant in the direction of the ford at Green River.

He was a young man in years, but he had the hard face and eagle eye of one matured in experience of that wild country. He bestrode a superb bay horse, dusty and travel-worn and a little lame. The rider was no slight burden, judging from his height and wide shoulders; moreover, the saddle carried a canteen, a rifle and a pack.

At length he rode into a trail and soon came in sight of the wide band of green cottonwood, willow and arrow-weed, and the shining, muddy river. On the far side, up on the level, stood a green patch and a cluster of houses. This was the town of Green River, Utah.

The rider needed to reach that town before dark. His food supply had run out two days ago. But unless there was a boat in which he could row across he would most likely not make it. His horse was too lame to risk in the eddies of that heavy, swirling, sand-laden river.

He rode on down the trail to enter the zone of green. In the thick dust he noted fresh horse tracks.

Under a cottonwood, some distance ahead, the rider espied a saddled horse, head down, cropping the grass. He proceeded more slowly, his sharp eyes vigilant, and was certain that he saw a man on the river bank.

Presently he rode out into an opening from which he could see a place where a ferry touched. Moored to the opposite bank was the ferryboat.

The rider sat his horse, aware that the man he had observed had stepped behind some willows. Such a move might have been casual. Then the man moved out into plain sight.

"Howdy," he said, laconically.

"Howdy," replied the rider. He became aware of a penetrating scrutiny which no doubt resembled his own.

The rider saw a striking figure of a man, gray with dust, booted and spurred, armed to the teeth. His wide sombrero shadowed a sharp bold face.

"Aimin' to cross?" he queried.

"Yes. I see a ferry boat over there." But on the moment the rider was watching his questioner. Then he swept a long leg over the pommel and slid to the ground, without swerving in the slightest from a direct front. "Lucky for me if I can cross on it. My horse is all in."

"Noticed thet. Fine hoss. Wal, I've been hangin' around for an hour, waitin' to go over. Reckon he'll be along soon."

"Town of Green River, isn't it?"

"Thet's the handle. You're a stranger hereabouts?"

"I am that."

"Where you hail from?"

"I suppose I might as well say Wyoming as any place," returned the rider, casually.

The other man relaxed with a laugh. "Shore. One place is good as another. Same as a name. Mine is Hank Hays." He spoke as if he expected it to be recognized, but it brought no reaction from his listener.

"You know this country?" queried the rider, and he too relaxed.

"Tolerable."

"Maybe you can tell me whether I ought to stop or keep on traveling?"

"Haw! Haw! I shore can. But thet depends," he said, pushing back his sombrero.

"Depends on what?" the rider asked.

"Wal, on you. Have you got any money?"

"About ten dollars."

"Huh. You can't go in the ranch business with thet. Not regular ranchin'. Lots of cattle between here an' the brakes of the Dirty Devil. Henry mountains, too. Some outfit over there. Air you a cattleman?"

"No," replied the rider, thoughtfully.

"Wal, thet's straight talk from a stranger," replied Hays, who evidently took the blunt denial as something significant. "Hullo, another rider. . . . Shore the desert is full of strangers today."

Back up the trail appeared a short, heavy man astride a horse and leading two pack animals.

"I saw him a while back. And here comes our ferryman. Looks like a boy."

"Huh. You haven't them eyes for nothin'. Wal, we'll get across now."

The rider, after another glance at the approaching man with the horses, took note of the ferry. Boat and third traveler arrived at the bank about the same time.

Hays, after a sharp look at the man with the three horses, led his animal aboard.

"How much is the fare?" queried the newcomer.

"Two bits."

"For man or beast?"

"Well sir, the regular fare is two bits for each man an' horse."

Whereupon the stout man threw the packs off his horses and carried them upon the boat.

"Wall, now, what is this fussy old geezer about?" queried Hays, much interested.

It was soon manifest. He tied the halter of his lead pack horse to the tail of his saddle horse. The second pack animal was similarly attached to the first. Then, bridle in hand, he stepped aboard.

"All right, boy. Go ahead."

"But, sir, ain't you fetchin' your horses on, too?"

"Yes, but I'll swim them over behind the boat. Get a move on, now."

The ferryboat pushed off with his pole, and dropping that for the big oar, he worked the boat out into the current, which caught it, and moved it across quite readily into the slack water on that side.

"Didn't like that, did you, boy?" the rider said, as he led the animal ashore.

Hays slapped his mount, driving him off the ferry, while he watched the stout man lead his three horses along the gunwale of the boat, until they could touch bottom. Heaving and splashing they waded out, and their owner followed, carrying one pack.

"Fetch my other pack, boy," he called.

"Johnny, don't do nothin' of the kind," observed Hays.

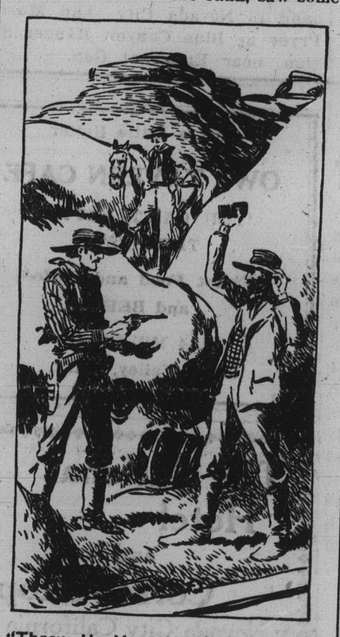
"I reckon I didn't intend to," said the boy, resentfully.

Puffing hard the stout man carried his second pack ashore.

"You're not very—obliging," he said, gruffly, as he felt in his pocket for loose change. The ferryboy came ashore, followed by Hays.

Presently the stout man, grumbling, and evidently annoyed at the necessity of producing a fat pocketbook, took out a one-dollar bill.

The rider, amused and interested from his stand on the bank, saw something that made him start. Hays whipped out a gun.



"Throw Up Your Hands!" Suddenly Yelled Hays.

"Throw up your hands!" suddenly yelled Hays.

"Wha-at's this? R-robbers!" the stout man gulped.

Hays reached for the man's wallet. Then he stepped back, but still with gun extended.

"Get out of here now," he ordered. And apparently he paid no more heed to his frightened victim.

"Pretty well heeled, for an old bird," observed the robber, squeezing the fat wallet.

"You'll hear from me, you glib-tongued robber," replied the other, furiously, as he rode away.

Hays sheathed his gun. He did not need to turn to face the rider, for, singularly enough, he had not done anything else.

"How'd thet strike you, stranger?"

"Pretty neat. It amused me," replied the rider.

"Is thet all?"

"I guess so. The stingy old skinflint deserved to be touched. Wasn't that a slick way to beat the boy here out of six bits?"

"It shore was. An' thet's what riled me. Reckon, though, if he hadn't flashed the wallet I'd been a little more circumspect."

"Is there a sheriff at Green River?"

"I never seen him, if there is. Wal, I'll be ridin' along. Air you comin' with me, stranger?"

"Might as well." returned the other.

"Stranger, what'd you say your name was?"

"Call me Wall, Jim Wall," rejoined the rider.

Hays' nonchalance reassured Wall as to the status of Green River.

"Any dance hall in this burg?" asked Wall.

"Nary dance hall, worse luck. Any weakness for such?"

"Can't say it's a weakness, but the last two I bumped into make me want to steer clear of more."

"Women?" queried the robber.

"It wasn't any fault of mine."

"Wal, women ruined me," returned Hays, sententiously.

"You don't look it."

"Men never look what they air."

"Don't agree with you. I can always tell what men are by their looks."

"How'd you figure me?" demanded Hays.

"I don't want to flatter you on such short acquaintance."

"Humph! Wal, here we air," replied the robber, halting before a red store building.

A red-whiskered man appeared in the doorway that led into a saloon and lodging house.

"Howdy, Red."

"Howdy, Hank."

"See anythin' of a fat party, sort of puffy in the face? He was ridin' a roan an' leadin' two packs."

"Oh, him. Sure. He rode through town yellin' he'd been robbed," returned the man called Red, grinning.

"The devil he did! Who was he, Red?"

"I dunno. Happy was standin' out here, an' when the feller stopped bellerin' thet he wanted the sheriff 'cause he'd been robbed, why, Happy up an' says, 'Hey, my friend, did he leave anythin' on you?' Then the feller up an' rode off."

It was this speech of Red's that decided several things for Jim Wall.

"I want to look after my horse," was all he said.

"Take him round back to the barn. I'm dog-tired. Send thet lazy Jake after my hoss."

This edifice was the last one on the street. The barn mentioned was some distance back, at the end of a pole fence. Upon turning a corner to enter the corral he encountered a loose-jointed young man.

"Say, are you Jake?" he asked.

"You bet," returned the other.

"There's a man out in front who calls himself Hank Hays. He wants you to come get his horse. Do you know him?"

The stable boy's reply to that was to rush off, his boots thudding.

"Enough said," muttered Wall to himself. "Mr. Hays stands well in Green River, as far as this outfit is concerned."

Wall sauntered back and before Hank Hays and the two individuals with whom he was talking were aware of his presence he had seen them. They turned at his slow, clinking step. Neither of the two with Hays was the man called Red.

"Hullo, here you air," spoke up Hays. "I was speakin' of you. Meet Happy Jack an' Brad Lincoln. . . . Fellers, this stranger to Green River answers to the handle Jim Wall."

Greetings were exchanged, but not one of the three offered a hand. To Wall the man called Happy Jack fitted his name. The only contradictory feature lay in his guns. Like Hank Hays, he packed two. The other, Lincoln, was some one to look at twice—a swarthy, dark, restless-eyed man, who, like Hays and his companion, had nothing of the cowboy stripe in his make-up.

"Let's have a drink," suggested Hays.

"Don't care if I do," responded Wall.

The interior, bright with lamplight, proved to be more pretentious than the outside of the saloon.

The men lined up at the bar, to be served drinks by Red, who was evidently bartender as well as proprietor. Wall missed nothing.

"Cowpuncher?" queried Lincoln.

"Yes. But I've not ridden the range much of late years," replied Wall.

"You've the cut of it. Where you aimin' for?"

"No place in particular," replied Wall, guardedly. "Might try riding here, if I can get on some outfit."

"On the dodge?" queried Lincoln.

"What might you mean by 'on the dodge'?"

"Anybody particular lookin' for you?"

"I daresay. More than one man."

"So I thought. Friend, you have the cut, the eye, the movement, the hand of a gun-fighter. I happen to know the brand."

"Yes? Well, if that's so I hope it isn't against me in Utah."

Here Hays, who had heard this bit of dialogue, interposed both with person and speech:

"Wall, thet's agin a man anywhere in the West, generally. So many fools wantin' to try you out! But I reckon it's a ticket for my outfit."

"Your outfit?" questioned Wall.

"Shore. Don't mind Brad. Let's go an' eat. . . . Fellers, we'll see you later."

Wall followed Hays into a back room, where a woman waved them to seats at a table.

At the conclusion of the meal Jim Wall had to guard himself against the feeling of well-being resulting from a full stomach.

"Have a cigar," offered Hays.

"Don't care if I do."

"Wall, let's go out an' talk before we join the other fellers," suggested Hays. They returned to the big room. It was empty except for Red, who was filling a lamp.

"They've all gone down to meet the stage. It's overdue now."

"Stage! From where?"

"West, so set easy," laughed Hays. "Thet one from east won't git in till next Wednesday. By thet time you won't be here."

"No? Where will I be, since you seem to know?"

"You may be in the garden of Eden, eatin' peaches," retorted Hays. "See here, Wall, you're a testy cuss. Any reason why you can't be a good feller?"

"Come to think of that, yes, there is," returned Wall, thoughtfully.

"All right. Thanks for that much. I reckon I understand you better. What were you, Wall, once upon a time?"

Wall laughed musingly. "A country school teacher once."

"Wal' I'll be dog-goned!" ejaculated Hays. "It do beat all what a man can be, at different times in his life. But I'm concerned with now. An' I'd like to ask you some questions."

"Fire away."

"You said you was broke?" Hays began.

"I will be when I pay for this night's lodging."

"Thet's on me. I'll stake you to some money. You'll want to set in the game with us?"

"Any strings on a loan?"

TO BE CONTINUED.

BLIND DATES

DEAR Mrs. Post: Will you tell me whether I was prudish in my point of view and whether you think I am just missing a lot of good times, which could otherwise be mine. This is what happened: A short while ago, before college reopened, my college roommate was going out with her boy friend to an evening cabaret. We both live in Chicago. Her mother did not want her to go to a late dance with the boy alone. So she asked me to go with them and they had a blind date for me, with a friend of his. He was not especially interesting and only a fair dancer but we had a pleasant evening. I wouldn't care if I never saw him again—but then, too, I would just as soon go out with him again if there was no one else who offered. A few evenings ago this boy called up and said he had a friend from St. Paul, a young business man who was the finest kind of man and coming to Chicago for two days, and that he had made a "blind" date for me with the St. Paul man to take me out for dinner and go to dance afterwards. He himself couldn't go out with us because he is on the football squad. He said the St. Paul man would call for me at seven o'clock and that I would have a wonderful time.

I don't know why I behaved as I did. I could not help it. I told him that having my time engaged for me to go out with a total stranger was not my idea of a wonderful time, and that nothing would induce me to make that kind of a blind date, and that I was not a taxi dancer, and then I hung up.

Now, of course, everything is all wrong. We are back in college, my roommate will hardly speak to me because her boy friend is angry because I was rude to his friend. Finally, my roommate said she would leave it to you to decide who was right and who was wrong.

Answer: It seems to me that you were right. It was entirely proper to go out with your roommate and her friend and whoever they might have invited to make a fourth. But to have gone out with the St. Paul man, as coolly arranged for you by a practical stranger, or in fact to go out alone with any man you did not know—unless under very extenuating circumstances—would have been extremely cheap. At the same time you may have been rude in the way you refused to be a taxi dancer. This depends on whether your voice was amiably casual, or angry. So you see?

NAMES

DEAR Mrs. Post: I was named for my father, who died when I was very young. For more than twenty-five years I have continued to use John Smith, Jr., as my name. I know that I am John Smith and should write my name without junior suffixed to it. But my father achieved some prominence and I hesitate to take his name even now. Please write your opinion of my case.

Answer: I think you yourself have given the only opinion there is to give. Actually you are now John Smith, but I have no idea whether the laws of your own state would compel you to sign your name or engrave your visiting cards or even to change your bank signature. I do happen to know of a number of men who for one reason or another continued to call themselves junior long after the death of their fathers. I also know of others, who, during their fathers' lives, have taken off the name junior by adding middle names. Apparently a man considers his name is his own to do with as he likes. But whether he has the legal right to make these changes, I don't know.

* * *

Dear Mrs. Post: Should an unmarried woman register in a hotel as Carol Jones or Miss Carol Jones? If miss is included, is it written as an undivided part of her name?

Answer: She writes Miss Carol Jones exactly as in addressing an envelope. She puts miss in parenthesis in front of her signature at the end of a letter to a stranger who does not know whether she is Miss or Mrs., or in your particular case, Mr.

* * *

My dear Mrs. Post: What should the young children at our school be taught to call a handy man whose duties also include driving the bus which brings them to and takes them from school every day? He is not a young man and we don't want them to be disrespectful to him, and yet don't know whether we should expect the children to say "Mr. Jones" or not?

Answer: I think it depends upon what you call him. If he is Silas to you, the chances are the children will call him Silas, too. You can, of course, make a point of it and tell them that it is polite to call him Mr. because of his age.

Problems

"Do you understand these money problems?"

"Not exactly," answered Senator Sorghum. "But I regard them as of great value. They are something to occupy people's minds with when they find they have more spare time than they know what to do with."

Cloth of Glass Hailed as Scientific Triumph

So much that is unusual and that would seem almost impossible to the lay mind, is now being accomplished by modern science, one is not surprised to learn that a cloth which has all the appearance of glass is the latest product of Lancashire research. Designs in colored glass are applied without laborious handwork to velvet, silk, lace, cotton and fabrics of all kinds, imparting to them the attraction of a diamante-studded gown.

Experiments along this line have been going on for months in Manchester and they have now reached a stage that justifies actual manufacture. The new product is expected to prove an asset in Lancashire's battle against Japanese competition. The makers of the new cloth use a synthetic glass which allows the cloth to be washed or ironed without damage to its design. The cloth to be printed is simply passed through a machine which indelibly impresses on it any design that is wanted.—London Mail.

Real Bayer Aspirin at Lowest Prices in History

A new schedule of prices for Bayer Aspirin tablets has just gone into effect. The Bayer Company introduced Bayer Aspirin in this country 35 years ago. It has since become one of the most widely used of all drug products and the price reduction will mean a saving to millions of consumers.

In announcing its new consumer price schedule, the Bayer Company issued the following statement:

"Bayer has always kept faith with its customers by giving them the finest, most uniform product that science can produce. Its decision to reduce prices is evidence of Bayer's desire to extend even further its service to its customers." The new consumer prices of Bayer Aspirin are now effective in 60,000 drug stores throughout the United States. —Adv.

Quite Simple

"I want this photograph of my husband enlarged," said the rather fussy woman. "Now, can you do it with his hat off?"

The photographer looked thoughtful.

"Yes," he said at last, "I think I can manage to fake the hair all right. By the way, which side does he part his hair?"

She looked at him in surprise.

"Oh, but you'll be able to see that when you take his hat off," she blandly replied.

EXPERIENCE---NOT EXPERIMENT

We are about to choose a governor. In making a choice please let us be guided by reason rather than prejulice and sentiment. Let us consider facts rather than promises and rumors. The Nugget advocates the election of Former Governor C. C. Young because of these facts:

Greatest state treasury surplus in California's history, $31,000,000.

130 independent bureaus consolidated into 13 centralized departments..

2280 miles of highway building in less than four years.

All worthy veterans' legsilation approved.

Aid provided for the needy, aged and the blind; crippled children's program inaugurated.

Capable business men, rather than politicians, appointed to important state offices.

State park system launched.

"Save the Beaches" movement inaugurated.

Oil and gas conservation effected.

Colorado River development forwarded.

Hundreds of farmers saved from bankruptcy by refinancing of reclamation projects.

California at this critical period vitally needs a steady hand at the helm. The governorship is the cornerstone of the whole structure of California business, the state's highest office of public trust. It requires a tried and trusted business administrator, whose training in the state's business is the state's best asset. Sound judgment demands that C. C. Young be elected governor.

CANDIDATE FOR BOARD OF EQUALIZATION HERE

Andrew Sheveland of Vallejo, candidate in this district for a seat on the State Board of Equalization, visited the Nugget office this morning. He was accompanied by William Morgan of Oakland, a member of one of Nevada City's pioneer families. Mr. Sheveland is in a three-cornered race for the offic which Dick Collins, now chairman of the Board of Equalization, holds. Collins is a candidate to succeed himself. Sheveland is a well known real estate dealer of Vallejo and has many friends in this section.

Harley M. Leete Jr., motored to Tahoe today with his aunt, Mrs. Samuel T. Farquhar of Berkeley, to spend a few days at Brockway.

Story of Gold Rush On Radio

Wdnesdays night's "Californians on Parade" program, over KPO, starting at 8:00 P. M., takes up the second phase of the story of the Gold Rush of 1849. Replete with memories of the days of gold, the broadcast recounts the adventures in the northern Mother Lode region from Nvada City to Weaverville.

John Cuddy, managing director of Californians Inc., tourist advertising organization, will relate incidents in the lives of the gold-seekers of 85 years ago, as they followed the Golden Highway, establishing mining camps, experiencing the thrill of great finds, and undergoing hardships. His talk will be punctuated with tales of romance and humor that have been left by the red-shirted miners.

In three parts, the Gold Days program will be completed on July 25, when the land of the southern Mother Lode will be re-visited.

Charles Hart and his stringwood ensemble will provide the musical background.

Louie Davidson and Harold Guenther spent Sunday above Sierra City on a fishing trip.

Miss Bonita Nobs Weds Walter Mildred

Of great interest to Nevada City socicty folk was the marriage of Miss Bonita Edith Nobs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Nobs of Grass Valley, and Walter Day Mildred, which took place on the west veranda of the Nobs home in the Empire gardens at 6 o'clock Saturday night with Rev. Charles Washburn reading the beautiful Episcopal mariage ceremony.

The ceremony took place on the silver wedding anniversary of the brides' parents. After the wedding dinner and the dance following at the Empire country club the happy young couple left on their honeymoon trip. Mrs. Mildred is a graduate of the Grass Valley High School and of Stanford, she spent a year in Europe studying art. Mr. Mildred has been a resident of Grass Valley for several years and has made many frinds there. He is employed as a sampler at the Empire-Star Mines, Ltd. After the wedding trip the young couple will reside in a cottage on the Empire grounds.

Ben Pryor of Corvallis, Oregon, and Roger Pryor of Maxwell, motored up Monday for a visit with their sister, Mrs. Ed Martine and husband in Nevada City and Murray Pryor at Blue Canyon Ranger Station, near Emigrant Gap.

Mr. William Davey, manager of Alpha Stores at Grass Valley, who has been quite ill, shows some improvement.

Orange and Raspberry Sherbet at Colley's Confectionery.—Adv.

L. R. Robins, mining engineer, and his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Frank Grady, motored to Lake Tahoe Sunday and visited for a time with Ex-senator T. L. Oddie and wife at their summr home.

GOLDEN EAGLE SHIPS ORE FOR MILL TEST

Thomas Bath, owner of the Golden Eagle and Bath Consolidated mining properties, aggregating 120 acres near Keystone Divide, reports he is making a test shipment of five tons of ore from the Golden Eagle to the Sierra-McLain custom mill. He states the ore runs around $14 per ton, old price for gold. Mr. Bath states that this is taken from grass roots practically since he has only sunk 16 feet. The ledge is four feet wide. On the same lead a stringer revealed $35 values. In the Rame Wenfron mine also on the Bath property he states he has extracted ore running $18 to $20 per ton.

DAINTY MODEL IN SILKS OR COTTONS

PATTERN 1666

We don't wonder you are attracted to this pretty frock—such a model assures its wearer of neatness and smartness every hour of the day. For morning wear choose cottons—a print would combine smartly with a solid color. The yoke and sleeves are cleverly cut in one—and prove especially easy to fashion. Wash silks in blithe colors could be used for an attractive afternoon version of this same frock—or all one fabric would be good, too. One of the new large illustrated dressmaking lessons is included with this pattern, insuring a perfect success.

Pattern 1666 is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 takes 3 yards 36-inch fabric and ⅝ yard contrasting.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeen Street, New York City.

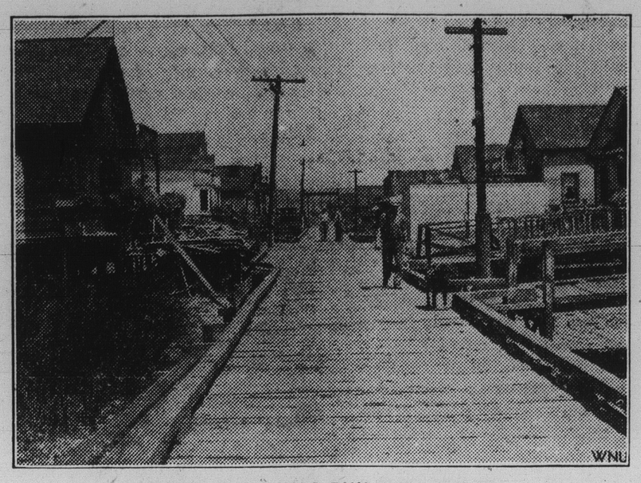
HISTORICAL CALIFORNIA



TOWN THAT WAS BUILT ON STILTS

(By WNU Service)

Collinsville, one time an important shipping port on the Sacramento river, which for years has claimed to be the most unique town in America because of being built on stilts over a swamp, will soon loose claim to that uniqueness.

Collinsville is on the bank of the Sacramento River about fifteen miles below Rio Vista in Solano county. The federal government has decided to give the residents a new deal by pumping sand from the river into the swamp over which the town is built and put it on a par with other American towns.

The history of Collinsville dates back to 1859. In that year C. J. Collins pre-empted the land where the town now stands. In 1861 he surveyed a town plat and built a wharf and store.

Collinsville has always been a town on stilts. A town without flower gardens, vegetable gardens, lawns or trees.

Another few months and the story will be different. There will be sand and soil to cultivate. Perhaps in time it will take on the same appearance of other small communities.

A portion of the town has already been built up with sand, this having been pumped in early last spring. Operations on further pumping will not be done until next January, according to Alphona Martoralla, the oldest man in the town, as salt water is now backing up from the sea, and if salt sediment were pumped onto the land it would hinder the growth of vegetation.

Stream and Trail

(By WNU Service)

Fish life, game birds, including ducks, are suffering in California and other states from the drouth, according to a survey conducted by fish and game and agricultural officials.

Not only will fish life suffer in the state as a result of the drouth, but upland game birds will feel the lack of water, which will cause a shortage of feed.

Arrangements have been made whereby game wardens are making a survey of arid ares and reporting to the main office the conditions they found. If water holes have dried up and none are available through natural sources, and feed is so scarce that it threatens to depopulate the birds, the commission is ready to furnish the water and feed necessary to carry quail and other game birds through the summer.

"The program of the commission during the past three years as affecting quail, has been so successful in increasing the abundance of birds in California that nothing will be left undone to preserve this work," J. Dale Gentry, president of the commission, has said.

"With a record crop of upland game birds being harvested at the two state game farms for release this summer, everything will be done to see that they are supplied with sufficient food and water," Gentry said.

In spite of adverse water conditions the annual production of trout in the state-owned hatcheries promises to come up close to the record of 1933, when 37,000,000 were raised and distributed in 30,000 miles of streams and 1,000 lakes of California.

The monthly report of the state fish and game commission shows that 37,939,383 eggs have been harvested so far this year and that this season there has already been planted over 6,000,000 fingerlings.

For the first time in many years southern California was called upon to supply rainbow trout eggs for northern hatcheries. The spawn taking in the north was not as much as normally, and to fill the requirements of the planting program it was necessary to get more eggs. From the Forest Home hatchery and Lake Arrowhead nearly 4,000,000 eggs were gathered and shipped north.

Directors of the Sonoma County Sportsmen's Club have recommended that the state reduce the limit on abalones from 10 per day to five per fishing license and urged changing the opening and closing of trout fishing season in coast streams. It was suggested trout streams be opened April 1 and closed September 1, instead of being opened May 1 and closed November 1 as at present.

News Oddities

(By WNU Service)

Balboa—A swordfish weighing 1,000 pounds made a fatal mistake by swimming into a drydock. The dock was emptied and the swordfish was dispatched with rifles, hoisted by a derrick, and distributed among canal employees.

San Francisco—The moth and the flame will be re-enacted in the Half Moon Bay area when scientists set lights traps to rid the artichoke camps of plumed moths and other parasites. Each one is attracted by a color, it was said. Electricity will be used to burn the insects to death.

Monrovia—A clock which was ticking more than 50 years before the Declaration of Independence was signed is still keeping accurate time 24 hours a day here. The timepiece belongs to Mrs. J. W. Hudson and was manufactured in France in 1704. It has been handed down from generation to generation until now it is 230 years old.

Lodi—Mrs. Mary French, county supervisor of the district representing Stockton, has been admitted to full membership in the Mustachio Club with a special dispensation excusing her from growing a mustache during the month of January. She is the only woman member of the club.

Altadena—W. K. Dunn, 40, of this city's junior college physical education department, nearly lost his left ear when struck by a golf ball recently on the Altadena golf course. Surgeons in the emergency hospital at Pasadena took eight stitches to piece the ear back in its proper place.

Madera—Oscar, a bull, born without a tail, is the proud possession of Chester Boyd. The bull recently broke out of pasture and, a neighbor dairyman says, did $51 worth of damage. Boyd may lose the bull, he fears.

Mining & Oil

(By WNU Service)

Two gasoline battles are pending, according to all signs. One is a war by the farmers to regain a differential they once were given by oil companies because they purchased gasoline in large quantities. Under the new oil agreement, the farmer is required to pay service station prices. The other trouble is a growing resentment by California motorists to the three two-cent raises in the price of the gasoline since the agreement was affected. Service station operators are also said to be opposed to the present level of prices because of a slackening demand. A protest is being planned to be sent Secretary of Interior Ickes, oil administrator.

The Signal Oil and Gas Company is interested in the wildcat drilling campaign to be launched perhaps by August 1 by the General Petroleum Corporation in McClure Valley, 15 miles east of Devil's Den and 30 miles south of Kettleman Hills. Some weeks ago General finished blocking up several thousand acres in that territory, some of which it leased from the Avenal Land Company. Signal recorded leases covering 4480 acres in the same area recently. Signal has tested the area with one well.

One of the most important oil land leasing transactions this year is under way west of Maricopa, McKittrick and Fellows oil fields, embracing 45,000 acres of the Cuyama Valley. Lessors are Cebrien brothers and banking interests of San Francisco. The lessee is Ira L. Burch of Los Angeles, who is president of the Cuyama Valley Oil Corporation, which has for a year been drilling a wildcat well on a portion of this block of acreage. Field scouts think the tract is to be given a thorough geophysical test in expectation of locating at least one oil pool. The acreage lies in Santa Barbara, Kern and San Luis Obispo counties.

New Meter Shows Just How to Set Carburetor

No longer need the carburetor of your automobile be a mystery, says the Scientific American. A newly perfected meter will promptly tell you exactly how to adjust the needle valve to give the most efficient "mixture."

More accurate than the most experienced repair man, this air-fuel meter registers with scientific exactness just how much too rich or too lean the carburetor mixture is. Of course, the average automobile owner will hardly have sufficient use for such an instrument to bother about it, but operators of fleets of trucks are already finding that exact adjustment of carburetors of their motors gives them appreciable savings in their large fuel bills.

The new meter, developed in Newark, N. J., is operated by passing a portion of the exhaust gas through the meter after the motor has warmed up. When this exhaust gas reaches the analysis cell of the instrument, a pointer is deflected over a wide scale to indicate the exact nature of the mixture.

The meter operates on the Wheatstone bridge principal, comparing the thermal conductivity of the exhaust gas and the air-fuel ratio of the carburetor. The scale of the meter is calibrated directly in pounds of air per pounds of gasoline burned.

So as to put the safety and quick action of Genuine Bayer Aspirin within the reach of everyone, the price you pay has now been reduced. Reduced so low that nobody need ever again accept some other preparation in place of the real BAYER ASPIRIN that you've asked for. 15c now for tins of 12 tablets. 25c now for bottles of 24 tablets.

And the big, family size, 100 tablet bottles have again been reduced in price. These new low prices are now in effect throughout the United States.

So—Always say "Bayer" When You Buy

And remember, when you ask for Bayer Aspirin at these new low prices it's unnecessary now to accept any other preparation in its place.

So—never ask for it by the name "aspirin" alone when you buy, but always say B-A-Y-E-R Aspirin and see that you get it.

Remember, too, that doctors advise it, for it DOES NOT HARM THE HEART. And that scientists rate it among the fastest known safe reliefs for pain. (See illustrations below.)
